

J. OGDEN ARMOUR ONE OF AMERICA'S KINGS OF FINANCE

Multimillionaire Works Harder and Has More Hours of Business Than Any of His More Than 20,000 Employees—Has No Time for "Society"—His Home and "The Game" Take Up His Whole Life.

Chicago—By virtue of his untiring, his diversified life and his commercial success, J. Ogden Armour is one of the most prominent business leaders of the world. But when not at the office, he is not at all a social animal. He is not a social animal. He is not a social animal.

Ask Mr. Armour himself and he will tell you that he is not a social animal. He is not a social animal. He is not a social animal.

And J. Ogden Armour has more business hours in the course of his life than any other man in the world. He is not a social animal. He is not a social animal. He is not a social animal.

He is not a social animal. He is not a social animal. He is not a social animal. He is not a social animal. He is not a social animal.

Well, it is exasperating, to say the least. The poultry business of Armour & Co. is not one of the money making ventures of the country in which his plants are located, always has an eye to the records of this poultry business. Occasionally the manager of a particular plant overstocks in poultry. He may buy 10,000 pounds of fowls when the market proves to be justly 5,000 pounds. There is a consequent loss of two to five cents a pound on the stock.

Manager "Called Down." The house may be 500 or 1,000 miles out of Chicago. The manager, counting upon the distance from the home office and the possibility of the head of the poultry department of that particular branch, receives the personal call of the corporation's head in a subtle manner. Because his pleasant interchanges of conventional greetings lead up to the business talk. The weather may be touched upon. The health of the manager may be inquired after. No words are wasted, however. Suddenly, "For a man whose love of home and family is so marked as his, one may see the tempering judgment which is characteristic of Ogden Armour," says a friend who has seen him in his home environment. "No one could express as fully as this, today, the spirit of the 'called down' of the house."

But Ogden Armour is anything but this. He is the natural, cheerful child of a father who realizes that in the instilled naturalness of a single daughter he may find the highest satisfaction of his life. The man who has no "game" in his business relations has none in his home relations. In the man is the evidence of the deep, lasting satisfaction in the home life, and it is enough.

Of Few Words in Business. There are few men high in the employ of Armour & Co. who never have seen this man of the home environment. Thousands would not recognize him in the position. To thousands of these he is a man to stand in awe of to fear, even.

Ogden Armour in business is the man of the fewest words. In utterance he is of the steel trap speech. His "yes" or "no" is not to be anticipated. They spring out of his set fixed inalterability like the crack of a rifle. And, once spoken, they are irrevocable.

In J. Ogden Armour the man associated with the business of Armour & Co. finds in this head of the company the master of details. In the famous heading of the best trust before the federal court in Chicago, there is the Armour testimony that in the matter of rebates of $700,000 or ly, like the explosion of a shotgun, the head of Armour & Co. touches upon business. "That overstocking in poultry just before Thanksgiving, Mr. Jones, it wasn't a good business move. Loss of five cents a pound on 5,000 pounds of fowls, it ain't a good business move."

The manager stammers a little. He has an excuse, perhaps, and the excuse is listened to respectfully. Talk may drift away from the subject a little. Then, as suddenly and unexpectedly, the head of Armour & Co. comes back to the topic from a new angle. It is an explosive recurrence, not in the inevitable low, even tones of the dictator. It is disconcerting to the degree that it is unexpected—and a disconcerted employee is regarded as one of the inspirations of Ogden Armour. Before he is done with the department head he may have come back three or four times to the same subject. But when he has gone the manager has the lesson of his mistaken judgment firmly impressed upon his mind. He will not offend again.

Close Supervision Necessary. That such a lesson may be worth while is suggested in the fact that there are about 35 of these branch houses throughout the country. Three hundred and fifty manager are necessary for their conduct, and 35 superintendents and as many traveling auditors overlook the business of these houses between the Armour head and the myriad details of buying and selling.

The possibility of $200 loss in each of 350 branches is an item, even in a business which nets $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 in a year.

It is only the accurate knowledge of Armour which saves him in these personal rounds of inspection. There are managers and superintendents and traveling auditors who are touchy enough by nature and by training to resent the inquiries of the kind. There is no resenting the keen, clear cut analysis of the master of a great business and of its almost infinitesimal details.

There is a story extant in which just one man did resent the Armour finding. He was the cashier of the Boston branch of the business, and he drew one of the big salaries on the Armour rolls. One day, unexpectedly as usual, Armour entered the Boston office a quarter of an hour ahead of the cashier.

Most men will admit that it isn't a pleasant experience to go to one's office expecting to find an employee there and who for any reason has not yet shown up. In the height of the baseball season it requires an unusually good American to accept any time for a man who has never had himself in such a position of cooling his heels because of an employee who has had entirely too much time for that particular thing.

Yet this is success. Who disputes it? Especially are spoken for in advance. The demand for books on blacksmithing, bricklaying, stonemasonry and other artisan labors are always out of the library. Many of the prisoners are excellent workmen, as the new buildings which are being built by convict labor indicate.

Books of poetry, the standard novels are read by the prisoners to a great extent and the mathematical works are always in demand. Many of the prisoners read Shakespeare and the works of Bryant, Longfellow and Whitaker have many admirers. Dickens is a popular author often asked for by the prisoners. The standard novels are read by the prisoners to a great extent and the mathematical works are always in demand.

Among the languages Spanish is the most popular, and in the last years several prisoners have taught themselves to read and write the language. The text books upon French and German come next in popularity, and these, as the Spanish books, are always out of the library.

These books are more popular than the works on languages and those upon plumbing and engineering.

Books the convicts read. Works on Trade Are Most Popular, Followed by the Languages.

What kind of books do convicts read? Contrary to the general belief this class of men, at least in the federal prison at Leavenworth, do not show a marked desire for the "blood and thunder" stories, nor even for other light fiction.

The most popular books among the prisoners in the 7,000-volume library of the penitentiary are text books and works on the various trades and languages.

DIPPING SHEEP OR HOGS.
Good Tank Which Can Be Made of Cement or Galvanized Iron.

A good tank for dipping sheep, goats or hogs may be made of cement or galvanized iron. A good size is 10 or 12 feet long at top, eight feet at bottom, with a height of at least five feet.

It is possible to make a good tank of cement, using these dimensions. For the tank, write to secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for Bulletin No. 235, "Cement on the Farm."

THE BALKING HORSE.
Diverting His Attention May Succeed in Getting Him Started Again.

A horseman who seems to know what he is writing about, says if the attention of a balking horse can be diverted half of the trouble is over; yet how few men will refrain from beating him at such times. When a horse is inclined to be balky he should be put in charge of the best horse man about the place and not driven by any one on the farm. If he is inclined to stop say "Whoa!" sharply. Then he will not think he is stopping of his own free will. Get down and walk about him, lifting up one foot and then another, tapping them with a stone may answer in driving his attention.

THE SCAB INSECT.
Of All External Parasites it is by Far the Most Dangerous.

Of all external parasites the scab mite is by far the most dangerous and troublesome, once it is permitted to effect a lodgment upon the sheep. It is not a common ailment upon farms in the east, but it is a very prevalent pest upon the ranges of the west to make the danger of infection great. In fact, upon the ranges, scab and starvation are the two principal diseases among the flocks.

The scab mite is an insect so small that it is not quite visible to the naked eye. It crawls under the skin, and by irritating the surface, it causes a flow of the fluid upon which it lives, and finally, by continuing this irritation, scabs or crusts are formed beneath which the insect deposits its eggs. In the course of two or three days, says Rural New Yorker, these eggs hatch. The newly-born parasite becomes adult in 15 days. Each female parasite will lay about 15 eggs. 10 of which will bring forth females and the other five males.

The new parasites, as soon as they are hatched, migrate and infect the adjacent territory which makes the scab mite spread by the constant advance of its circumference, and the eggs of new parasites are deposited upon posts or boards upon which the sheep rub themselves, and thus are ready to seize any advantage to again locate themselves upon other sheep, when they in turn become centers of infection. Gerlach, a German authority, computes that in three months a single female scab insect may become responsible for the existence of 1,500,000 progeny, thus in 45 days after infection the scab mite from one parasite might be 1,500,000. In 75 days, 150,000, and in 90 days, 1,500,000. As a matter of fact, it requires about 90 days for the scab disease to become well spread and very troublesome after introduction into a clean flock.

SILAGE IN FATTENING STEERS.
Prof. Thomas Shaw Thinks That Corn Silage Cannot Be Beat.

In corn growing areas it is my conviction that no food for growing or fattening steers will prove cheaper than silage. It is a staple food, and in many ways of diverting a horse's attention to make him forget his bad habits, like pouring a little water in his ears or rubbing sand in his mouth. If he is inclined to stop say "Whoa!" sharply. Then he will not think he is stopping of his own free will. Get down and walk about him, lifting up one foot and then another, tapping them with a stone may answer in driving his attention.

It goes well with clover hay or alfalfa or any leguminous fodder. Of the latter five pounds or about that much would be wanted per day. The grain ration, fed ground, would be about a pound or slightly more per day for every pound of live weight of the steer. The amount mentioned is for a steer after he is on full feed. Loading up to full feed, considerably less would be used. The meal should be fed on the silage. When the silage is put in the feed box, the meal is thrown over it and the meal and silage are mixed while they are being eaten, which means that all is received in the rumen of the cud, which is favorable to thorough digestion.

It will not answer to feed only silage as the fodder ration. Some dry fodder is necessary as a safeguard, but when the silage is sweet and good, it would be safe to feed somewhat more than the amounts mentioned. Fed in suitable amounts, it would exercise a favorable influence on digestion.

The day is certainly coming when there will be a great extension in the building of silos, and it cannot come too soon. No other method of raising corn will compare with it. It utilizes the entire product, stalk and grain.

Michigan's Roads.

Statistics show that Michigan has 62,295 miles of public road, of which 6,777 miles are surfaced with gravel and 248 miles with stone or concrete. The balance of the state have an unusually large mileage of gravel roads. This is due principally to the fact that these counties are well provided with gravel suitable for road building. By comparing the total road mileage with the area of the state it appears there are 1.2 miles of public road per square mile of area. A comparison of mileage with population shows that there is one mile of road to every 34 inhabitants, and one mile of improved road to every 244 inhabitants.

Americans Eating Mutton.

The Americans are getting the mutton eating habit. Heretofore they have been wedded to the sirloin steak, but now they are catching on to the merits of the mutton chop. This change in taste means much for the future of the sheep and the mutton. It will make a good meat of much food on the farm, while the income from the wool may be counted anywhere as so much clean profit.

Piles in Swine.

For one to two tablespoons a day per head until better, then every few days until all right. Keep the hogs dry as possible. We had much trouble a few years ago, caused by feeding too rich, heavy bran soil without salt. Hogs should have salt and sulphur every week in the year.

Castrating Pigs.

All castration necessary should be done when the pigs are six weeks old, and while they are still with the sow. It might be well castrated before from common sense, and all males should have no reliance can be placed on the offspring of such boars, even though they were sired by a purebred.

Peanuts for Dairy Cows.

Prof. Corbett of the department of agriculture is a great believer in peanuts—as a food for dairy cattle. He urges the farmers of Texas to grow them for this purpose.

Working the horse too hard for three days at this time of the year is harder on him than working him for a week at any other time of the year. Do not try to do too much for the first week or so till the animals get accustomed to the hard work.

Andalusian wool and a No. 10 hook will make a very soft, cosy garment, but any other wool and a suitable hook may be used, and with a little attention, these directions will serve for any sized jersey required. Back thread only to be taken up throughout the work.

Work a chain the length required from the top of the shoulder to the lower edge of the jersey, turn pass 1, and work a single crochet (pass the hook through the stitch and draw the wool through that stitch and the loop on the hook at the same time) into each of the nearest 10 stitches, then a double crochet into each of the other stitches to end of chain; turn with one chain, work a double crochet on each double crochet of previous row, and a single crochet on each single crochet; turn with one chain and repeat, working singles on singles and doubles on doubles to and fro until the top (or double crochet end of the work) is of sufficient width for the shoulder, then work 11 chain stitches, turn pass 1, and continue in each of the other 10, and continue the row as before; there will now be 10 single crochets at each end of the work; continue working rows of this length for half the size required for the neck, then discontinue the singles at the top and work the same number of rows as in the first single row piece, one half the amount. In the next row, leaving a sufficient number of double crochets unworked for the armhole. Make a corresponding number of chain stitches—with one extra frequently women buy these coats and have simple skirts or bodices and skirt made up to wear with them. One of this type is shown in our cut today. It is of tulle color pompe and cut with a most attractive development of the kimono sleeve idea, but the unique feature of the garment is the trimming, which consists of a regular braiding such as that as popular in the south-east, but done in ordinary fine of medium size. Ornaments and handkerchiefs down the fronts were cleverly made of (white and the fasteners passed around buttons of empire green silk. A touch of this green silk appeared also as a neck finish and on the sleeves.

ALL KINDS OF HANDBAGS.
Brown the Most Popular Color for This Season.

Brown bags and purses are the fact of the season, and in addition, pink, ecru, white and various other colors, tanned or colored in this fashionable shade are now being carried.

Some of the purses are long, others are short, and are severely adorned or artistically ornate. There is almost endless number of designs to choose from this year.

For business the plain bag of medium size in brown leather with strap handles is considered the most serviceable and practical model, while the smaller bag of dull suede or plaided kid, effectively mounted with silver, gold or artistically studded with tiny metal heads, is carried for dressy street wear.

Metal bands, plain or chased with flowers, scroll or geometric designs, are being used extensively on purses and make most attractive ornamentation for alligator or pigskin bags that are otherwise plain.

The oblong purse with a trimming except a button like a clasp at one end is considered fashionable in alligator, suede or any of the favorite skins. Such a model is particularly useful for shopping, because it has a strong chain handle that may be in hand, imitation silver, gold or tinted in any shade to match the costume, or to correspond in tone with the leather bag.

To Remove Lines.

The talker's wrinkles, prominence in and near the lower cheek and run down under the chin from side to side. The straight up-and-down lines furrowed in the brow denote sternness and sharpness. Diagonal lines, crisscrossed in the middle of the brow, mean small frets and worries. The cheerful diagonal lines, crisscrossed in the middle of the brow, mean small frets and worries. The cheerful diagonal lines, crisscrossed in the middle of the brow, mean small frets and worries.

The whole process is rejuvenating and stimulating. Outdoor exercise, restful, refreshing sleep and nutritious food are essential in the treatment of wrinkles.

FOR THE HAIR.

The hair needs a sun bath two or three times a week. Brush the hair fluffy from the scalp to the length of the tresses. Lift it up in your hands and shake it so as to separate it as much as possible.

Then stand where the sunshine drifts over the head. Brush the hair and lift it up with the hands, letting it drop slowly. Stand in the sunshine for three to five minutes—not until you have sunbathed.

The sun bath invigorates the hair and tones up the scalp.

To Improve the Neck.

Exercise will improve the appearance of the neck. That, with deep breathing, which fills the lungs to their utmost capacity, develops the chest and the neck. The tops of the lungs come just above the middle of the collar bones on each side, and if they are not extended when one breathes the air is not changed in the upper part, and the tiny air cells of which they are composed collapse. Therefore exercise your lungs with deep breathing exercises if you would have healthy lungs and a fine chest. To do this draw in the lungs, gradually filling the lungs, and then slowly expel the air. It is well when you have filled your chest to its full capacity to tap the chest lightly with the fingers several times.

Economical Governor.

Gov. Stokes of New Jersey, is cutting down extravagant appropriations. He thinks his state spends too much for memorials and has disapproved of an $8,000 item for removing the remains of Gen. Phil Kearny and providing monuments.

It scored quite a victory, down the day last week. An effort was made to demolish one of the monuments, one that is to be dedicated to the memory of the late Lewis Wallace, but it was not done. About this time a man happened along and offered to do the job, and asked the weight of the monument. It was moved on one of the three by one half inch, but was encountered in accomplishing its purpose.

Fatty Felix.
—The Nephew Daily News has the following to say of Fatty Felix, who appeared in this city recently.
"Fatty Felix," a farce comedy constructed from newspaper cartoon, without any serious attempt at a plot, but with a merry jangle of continuous fun throughout, including lively musical specialties, was the bill offered at the Nephew theatre, Saturday night. The comedy team, Chas. Hart and Gertrude Gillert, old favorites, were recognized. The cast included Marie Curran very appropriately termed the "California Nightingale." Miss Curran was in the cast of the first time, and it was her elegant rendition of "Love Me and the World is Mine" as any criterion, who will certainly "make good." She possesses a rich soprano voice of remarkable range and effectiveness that cannot fail to please.

Athletics Beat Mosinee.
Mosinee came down Sunday with the determination to wipe the earth with the Athletics. They were not after a game with the Tigers and it was up to them to show what they could do. They started the game in grand style on Roberts the "Mosinee Twirler" fanning six men in the first three innings. Mosinee scoring three runs in the first three innings it began to look real bad for the home boys. In the next two innings the Athletics scored five runs holding Mosinee to their own, making the score 5 to 3 in favor of the Athletics at the end of the fifth inning. Base ball fans began to think they were cheated out of the rest of the game on account of the rain, but the high school with its white canvas afforded a good shelter from the rain. After the shower the boys got to work again and finished the game.
The last four innings were played fast and furious, each side scoring one run.
The line up is as follows:

Death of Berlin Ramsay.
The following dispatch tells of the death of Berlin Ramsay, which occurred in Chicago on Sunday:
"Berlin Ramsay, social leader in the Fox valley and known throughout a district of the state as 'Lord Ramsay,' one of Wisconsin's wealthiest men and a close relative of Lord Ramsey of England, the greatest champion of the age, died Sunday at the Presbyterian hospital in Chicago where he was taken early in the week.
Mr. Ramsay was president of the Wisconsin Malt and Grain company, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the state outside of Milwaukee. Since coming here about fifteen years ago, Mr. Ramsay rapidly accumulated wealth until he was recognized as one of the financial leaders of the state.
His social leader was those of the English manner and his idiosyncrasies have made his name well known throughout the country. He was about 60 years old and is survived by a wife and family.
An intense dislike for publicity left even intimate friends without a clue as to his career previous to coming to Appleton and he was never known to give out any facts relating to his early life beyond the information that he came from England.
Ramsay's wife and two daughters were with him at the time of his death, having accompanied him from their home when he was brought to the hospital. The body will be taken to Appleton tomorrow."
Mr. and Mrs. F. MacInnon left on Monday for Appleton to attend the funeral, as well as Mrs. Geo. E. Hokinson and Mrs. V. D. Simons.

Waste Baskets in Place.
Last week the ladies of the Federated Clubs received twenty-four waste paper baskets, which have been placed about the city in places that will be convenient for such receptacles, and it is expected that hereafter all waste paper will be deposited in these baskets instead of throwing it into the streets to be blown about and assist in making the thoroughfares filthy. The baskets will be taken care of promptly by the city and should prove quite beneficial.

The Alumni banquet of the Wood County Teachers' Training school was held at the Eagles hall on Friday evening and it proved to be a great success. There are now about one hundred members of the alumni, and these annual banquets have become quite a pleasing feature. The banquet on Friday evening was the most enjoyable that has yet been held.

A chatauqua at home has possibilities if a ready response is made to the efforts of Mr. Everett, Field Secretary of the Good Templar Assembly, who is in the city. The Assembly will furnish fine lectures, delightful entertainments and dancing concerts.

A $400 Pain.
Clark Lyon probably had the biggest "pain" of anybody in town on Monday. It was a pain of plate glass for the front of Harry Moon's saloon. It was the intention to put the new pane into the place where there is a broken window, but in handling the piece of glass it was broken before it was taken from the box. This would give anybody a pain, and in this case the pain cost $400. We do not know what Clark said when the glass was broken, but then it probably does not make much difference, as it is doubtful if it would stand printing, anyway.

Seniorship Cost Money.
According to a sworn statement filed at the office of the secretary of state Isaac Stephenson spent $38.71 to be elected United States senator from Wisconsin to succeed John C. Spooner. The largest single item was $211, for headquarters at the Park Hotel, W. Hatten of New London, defeated candidate, spent $591.25 and Congressman E. C. K. Lenoir, defeated candidate for United States senator, filed his expense account with the secretary of state saying that $50.15 was expended in his behalf.

Ball Game Sunday.
Next Sunday there will be a ball game in this city between the Stevens Point team and the Tigers from this city. An excursion will be run over from Stevens Point so as to enable those who desire to come over and see the game. The fare will be 25 cents and there is no doubt but there will be a good crowd in attendance.

Corner Stone Laid.
Last Wednesday afternoon the corner stone of the new Wood County Teachers' Training school was laid. There was a large crowd in attendance. E. P. Arpin was master of ceremonies and the speaker of the day was B. R. Gunglins. The latter spoke at some length and his remarks were listened to with interest by those present.

Says They were not Carp.
W. W. Monde who is somewhat of a fisherman himself, says that the fish caught above the dam and thought to be carp, were not of that variety, but a large huffale, of which there are considerable numbers in the waters of the river. Mr. Monde says that there are no carp above the dam.

OBSCURIVE®

AMONG CRANBERRY MEN.

EDITED BY J. A. GAYNOR.

Grand Rapids, Wisconsin.

G. M. Maile, who has been in charge of the Wisconsin State Cranberry Experiment Station during the past two years, has been delegating to the Department of Agriculture of the Wisconsin University to visit the cranberry bogs of Cape Cod and New Jersey to make observations on soil, temperature, atmospheric humidity and other conditions affecting the growth of cranberries.

He expects to reach Plymouth about July 15th and to spend about two weeks on the Cape and about ten days in New Jersey. His observations will be published in a University bulletin.

The flooding experiments for the destruction of the fire worms have not been as successful as hoped for, because the reason that many of the worms came to the surface as reported in last week's issue.

James Gaynor refuted the part of his hope that showed live fireworms after the first flood, and sprinkled on twenty gallons of kerosene to the acre. This formed a film of oil over the surface of the water and killed the worms, but it also killed many of the young shoots that were then about an inch long. It did not seem to injure the old leaves or buds that were not open, and it is probable that it had been put on ten days earlier, before the terminal buds opened, it would have killed the worms without injury to the vines.

The results from the use of lime and paris green can not now be stated with certainty.

We are informed that Dean Russell, the successor of Dean Henry, will attend our meeting on Aug. 15th. He should be given as his subject on that occasion "What the University Proposes to do for the Cranberry Grower."

The Cranberry Exchange. New York, June 22.—The National Fruit exchange which will handle more than 60 per cent of the cranberry crop of the country was formally organized at the Prince George hotel, organized at the Prince George hotel, this city, Wednesday.

The exchange is a consolidation of the Cape Cod Cranberry Sales Co., the New Jersey Cranberry Sales Co., and the Wisconsin Cranberry Sales Co., and will be the marketing agency for the products of all the members of those various companies.

The officers were elected as follows: President, George R. Briggs, Plymouth, Mass.; vice president, Dr. O. E. Wilbur, Trenton, N. J.; A. C. Bennett, Grand Rapids, Wis.; Dr. C. R. Rogers, East Waukegan, Mass.; treasurer, J. H. Burr, Pemberton, N. J.; secretary, O. M. Chaney, formerly of Des Moines, Ia., and general manager, A. U. Chaney, formerly head of the A. U. Chaney Co., Des Moines.

On Thursday incorporation papers were filed under the laws of New Jersey with a capitalization of $50,000. At the meeting Wednesday the cranberry growing districts were represented by delegates who were elected directors in the exchange. The directors of Wisconsin are A. C. Bennett, Grand Rapids and R. H. Loring, Berlin.

The organization of this new company is perhaps one of the biggest propositions that has ever been undertaken in the fruit trade, because of the fact that it brings under the control of one head more than 60 per cent of the cranberries produced in this country. The National Fruit exchange is not a company of great financial strength, and is not intended to be. It is an exchange and will be operated along the lines of the California Fruit Growers' exchange, which handles the bulk of the California oranges.

The concern will take over the entire cranberry business of the A. U. Chaney Co., Des Moines, Ia., which handled the bulk of the output of cranberries of the country last year. All business will be done direct with the marketing agency and principally by the marketing agency. The company, however, will have district representatives to inspect cars, and attend to detail work of this kind in a more satisfactory distribution. The exchange system, which is Mr. Chaney's idea and was used to a great extent by his own company last season will enable jobbers in any part of the country to buy exactly what they want in quality, size and color. In fact they can, by referring to their catalogue, order just the kind of berry their trade calls for. All berries will be carefully graded and sorted, and the highest quality of berries, color and variety. Each growing district will be under the supervision, so far as packing and grading is concerned, of an experienced inspector who will see that the packages are carefully graded and properly branded.

Massachusetts, which is known as the Cape Cod district, will have thirty-three different brands, varieties and grades; New Jersey will have twelve, and Wisconsin eleven. All of these brands will be catalogued and a catalogue placed in the hands of each buying jobber at the beginning of the season, so that the dealer can buy just as intelligently by the catalogue as he could were he on the ground and inspected the fruit. Each page of the catalogue will represent a brand. At the top of that page will be a fac-simile of the brand. Below an explanation of the variety will come first, second, the color, size, shape and general style of the berry will be explained, and third, will show what brand is shipped in the name of the dealer, and if the buyer wants a special variety.

A. U. Chaney, the originator of the idea which has finally terminated in the organization of this big company, is perhaps the best known cranberry man in the country today. Besides this throughout the west where he comes from, and particularly in the state of Iowa, he is looked upon as one of the greatest organizers in the fruit and produce business.

In an interview with the Packer man Mr. Chaney said regarding the new exchange: "We do not want the trade to get the impression that we are going into the field to antagonize growers of cranberries. I believe that we will bring the method of packing, grading, and distributing cranberries up to a higher level. I cannot see why this will not benefit everybody in the cranberry trade. Heretofore, jobbers who dealt direct with the bogs were compelled to send their men there and bid against competitors in order to buy the fruit. Of course, there was considerable complaining done, but those that wanted cranberries badly had to go there and buy them. Now then our company is essentially a growers' company, which is merely an exchange through which these growers will market their products. We will do everything within our power to make it as easy and as satisfactory as possible for the buyer. We will not only guarantee him careful grading, absolutely honest packing and branding, but will see that his orders are attended to promptly and that his business is taken care of with dispatch. These are our aims and objects. We do not intend to antagonize any interests whatever. We believe that the jobber will find it more satisfactory doing business through us than before when he was growing interests were scattered and he had to spend lots of money in traveling expenses and hotel bills in trying to get suitable stock for his trade. The charge that has been made that we are a cranberry trust is untrue. We will control about 60 per cent of the crop of the country. If we are a trust that the Berenda Onion Growers' Assn., the Texas onion deal, the Georgia Peach Growers' Assn., and in fact dozens of other big organizations such as I might mention, are also trusts."

The outlook for the cranberry crop in the three big growing sections briefly is as follows: Thursday in the last week there was a frost in the Cape Cod district which destroyed about 20 per cent of the buds. If nothing else happens to cause losses in the growth, the crop will be a fair one. However, it is somewhat backward both in Cape Cod and New Jersey, and is not looking near as well as it did this time last year.

Wisconsin prospects are not as good as last year, but they all have an average crop if nothing happens between now and harvest time.

The fire worms are now pupating. The first chrysalis was found on Wednesday last, June 19th. In about a week the chrysalis changes to a full fledged moth, which in a few days, will begin to lay eggs for the brood that does the most mischief.
